PHOENIX CONTINUES

TO BE UNSATISFIED.

Continued railroad speculation in Phoenix by the local newspapers indicates that the capital city has an intense desire to get on the main line. Last week one of the wholesale merchants of Phoenix rented an extra warehouse and straightway the Republican reckoned that the significance of this was the coming of more railroads. It is pleasing to contemplate this continued confidence of the Phoenixian that he will yet escape from the isolated wilderness. But as a matter of fact Phoenix has little to complain of because of the efficiency of its rail connection now with "the hub," of the southern portion at the state. One may leave Phoenix at 1 p. m. and nine hours later be toasting his shins by the radiator in the Copper Queen hotel in this city and about equal time may now be made going to the capital city from Bisbee.

Phoenix and Phoenix newspapers are given too much to complain. Last week the Gazette was deploring the fact that the first sight a stranger got of that city on his arrival was a "ramshackle" depot, making no mention of the state capitol building, a veritable "official beehive," where are housed platoons and battalions of salaried officials, jammed into legislative committee rooms and legislative halls like sardines in a box. The official salary roll in Phoenix should be sufficient to recompense that city for any lack of railroads or depots and there is little reason for complaint there because of the state of prosperity and besides it is believed there are yet more officials in mind of the legislators who are due to meet again during the coming winter. Cheer up Phoenix.

THE SHAME OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Of all the criticisms of Governor Bleasde, of South Carolina and his blatherskiting at the meeting of state governors last week, at Richmond, Virginia, none have been more timely and well directed than the following from the Louisville Courier-Journal:

"In the name of South Carolina Governor Calhoun advocates mob murder at the conference of Governors in Richmond. And why not put it that way? South Carolina has chosen Mr. Bleasde as its governor, knowing full well the character of the man. It is said that the people always get as good a brand of government as a majority of them deserve. If that is not always strictly true it is at least true that when a man whose caliber is well known is elected as governor that state gets the kind of governor that majority want. A lack of general enlightenment may, of course, cause them to want him.

"There is an intelligent minority in South Carolina to which Bleasde and his outbursts are gall and wormwood. Unfortunately for intelligent minorities the rule of the majority sometimes illustrates the pessimistic assertion of the late Henrik Ibsen that minorities are often right and majorities wrong. There's nothing to be done about it but to become a majority. So long as the majority in South Carolina remain sufficiently unenlightened to prefer the Cole Bleasde type of governor that is the type of governor they will have. The minority will have to submit to the humiliation with what grace it can until its members can awaken enough of the voters who are now the prey of the charlatan.

"Governor Bleasde will be hotly denounced by the press, or that portion of it which fairly represents the intelligence of the country. He will be delighted with the censure he receives. The heat and passion of persons who are disgusted with a governor who advocates lynching and shouts encouragement to murderers before a conference of his colleagues will be wasted upon the object of attack. A politician of the Bleasde type knows his constituents and caters to them. He is not injured, or displeased, by criticism from outside sources. He makes capital of it.

"The fire eating" type of office-seekers has more wisdom than some of his critics credit him with. He lacks conscience rather than common sense. Like the long-haired street hawker who sells a cure-all to the ignorant many who are persuaded by his harangue, he knows the ignorance of the many, and how to get a living by trading upon it. The hawker is often a man who has cleverness enough to win success in other fields of endeavor, but he has also cleverness enough to know the field that offers to him the greatest amount of easy money.

"With the intelligent minority in South Carolina everyone whose mind is well developed, and well balanced will sympathize whenever he hears Governor Bleasde 'cut loose' for the benefit of the grandstand in his state. Nevertheless it devolves upon the minority, if South Carolina is to advance in enlightenment beyond the stage at which a governor of the Bleasde type is a possibility, to do missionary work between elections instead of doing battle at election time, swallowing the bitterness of defeat and cursing the 'pa' whites' who know no better than to prefer as their chief executive a man who rattles the rafters with his declarations of independence of law and scorn of order. The stiff-necked aristocrat of South Carolina, with his culture and his traditions, must reach the unenlightened and narrowly prejudiced South Carolinian—to whom the Bleasde type of politician plays deliberately and successfully—and convert him. How it is to be done is a question that must be left to the anti-Bleasde and anti-murder South Carolinians. So long as there are two parties in the state, the stiff-necks and the rough-necks, there will be more rough-necks than stiff-necks. A Governor Bleasde will be always a probability and often an accomplished fact."

MINERAL OUTPUT OF 1911.

The mineral production for the year 1911 was the third largest in the history of the country. In value it was not so large by about $70,000,000 as the output of 1910, but it is greater than that of any other year except 1907, which was the banner year of mineral production in the United States.

According to a table prepared by the United States Geological Survey the ten leading minerals in 1911, value of product considered were coal, pig iron, clay products, copper, petroleum, gold, stone, natural gas, cement and lead. The total value of all the mineral production was nearly two billions. Coal, as usual, was at the top of the list with a value of $626,366,785 and lead at the bottom of the ten leading products with a value of $38,553,320.

The Geological survey collected statistics on sixty-six mineral products in 1911, and of these forty-five showed an increase while twenty-one showed a decrease. There was a decrease of $13,000,000 in the value of the bituminous coal product as compared with 1910, and a still larger decrease in pig iron, which showed a slump of about $8,000,000 in value. Clay products fell off about $8,000,000 and cement produced was 1,750,000 barrels in excess of that produced in 1910.

The Geological Survey places the bituminous coal output for 1911 at 495,757,101 short tons and the anthracite production at 89,771,488 long tons. The increase in the value of the anthracite output was almost as great as was the decline in bituminous coal, amounting to $15,000,000. Other minerals which increased in value over 1910 were lead and zinc, each more than $3,500,000; petroleum more than $6,000,000; natural gas nearly $3,500,000.

BETTER THAN A HIGH BIRTH RATE.

In the first six months of the present year the number of births in France fell off about 7,000, compared with the corresponding period of 1911. Yet instead of an excess of deaths amounting to more than 18,000 in the first half of last year, there was a gain of 14,172 in the first six months of 1912.

This change was brought about by a decrease of 29,645 in the number of deaths. So that taking no account of emigration or immigration, a loss in population in the first half of 1911 was converted into a small but encouraging gain by the marked lowering of the mortality rate.

What France is accomplishing is a change common to all advanced countries. Everywhere the lowering of the birth rate is offset, in greater or less degree, by a falling death rate, and there is room for still greater improvement along these lines. The saving of life is better than a rising birth rate. It means a vast decrease in pain and suffering and losses of many kinds.

If the French death rate could be cut down to the level maintained in Holland the present birth rate, which is the lowest in the civilized world, would give the French nation a gain of at least 300,000 annually, aside from the slow growth which has at ways taken place through immigration from Italy, Switzerland and Belgium.

In the future human life will be much better guarded than it ever has been in any part of the world. Science and government and the humane instincts which are constantly manifesting new force will unite to lessen the frightful waste of infant life especially and of the workers who perish because of the preventable danger of their occupation.

There is more railroad trouble brewing in Phoenix. The Santa Fe line is now the offender. This road recently issued an order forbidding local passengers from riding on what is called the limited train on that line from one station to another in the state. The corporation commission has issued an order to the Santa Fe to show cause, if any there be, why it should not be compelled to haul all passengers on the limited trains who have the price. It is related that when it was announced in Phoenix that the Santa Fe had denied one of the Apache county sheep herders the privilege of riding in its de luxe train that Amos Cole, of the corporation commission, let out a roar almost loud enough to shake the foundation of the Roosevelt dam and that Paul Geary and F. A. Jones at once put all the commission clerks at work on a matter with which it is proposed to hold Mr. Santa Fe within the lines of a true progressive government. The time for the hearing on this matter has not been set, but the case will attract much attention, as it will test the question as to whether a railroad may designate the identity of passengers to be hauled on its trains.

The gathering of one thousand Bob Moose in Chicago this week would indicate that they have faith that the political range will be better for them in the future than in the past. Col. Roosevelt came west on a special train of ten cars loaded with his New York admirers. Among those present were McCormick of the Harvester trust, Frank Heney of the California Johnson machine and Bill Flynn, of Pittsburgh.

There is pending in congress measure to make the President's term six years, without any possibility of re-election. Colonel Roosevelt no doubt feels that the American people can be depended upon to restrict a man to a reasonable period of service as president.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

KANSAS' FIRST WOMAN JURY

(Record-Herald.)

Two years ago a jury of men at Eldorado, Kan., failed to agree on a verdict after balloting for two days. The other day Kansas' first woman jury reached an agreement in the same case in three hours.

Candor is a fine quality in a juror. We have the confession of one of these jurors that "when the women first retired to the jury-room, they scarcely knew what to do. A very common experience of male jurors, but not the most stupid man who ever sat on a jury would admit it.

Obedience is valuable. These women had been instructed not to discuss the case, and for three days they had refrained from doing so. "Naturally," as one of them remarked, "there was a great deal to be said." And we have a picture of them all talking at once, but stopping to pay the closest regard to the court's instruction. They even read them over three times, voluntarily as they were.

Honesty is not to be despised. And how we approach the great point. The women concluded their deliberations at 11:30 o'clock at night. Another half hour and they would have been entitled to $2 extra for jury service. Did those women hesitate? Not for a moment. They returned the verdict immediately. It is the testimony of employers generally that women have not mastered the gentle art of "soldering" on the job. They don't spare themselves and they are very conscientious—even in the public service.

WORK IN THE STATES

(The Commoner.)

The great democratic victory in the states should not be allowed to pass unimproved. The income tax amendment should be ratified by every state that has not already ratified it. The amendment providing for the popular election of senators should also be ratified—only two states have ratified thus far. The primary system should be adopted wherever it has not yet been and should be extended to presidential contests. Provision should be made for the expression of a second choice at the primaries. The initiative and referendum should be secured where they have not been. The recall should be secured also, where the people are ready for it, but it should not be pushed where it would endanger the securing of the initiative and referendum—these are the more important and with the initiative secured anything else can be obtained when the people want it. Publicity should be ensured, legitimate corporations should be effectively regulated and trusts should be prevented. Wherever the democrats are in power they should proceed to fulfill the promises made during the campaign.

GOVERNMENT WARDS.

(Wichita Beacon.)

Andrew Carnegie's desire to give $25,000 a year to retired presidents of the United States may be all right, but there are a lot of retired laboring men who were never able to make a competency while working for Mr. Carnegie; why not establish a pension fund for them and let the government look after its ex-presidents if it feels that something of that sort should be done?

as a matter of fact, all this grave suspicion about an ex-president of the United States and what to do with him doesn't smack very strongly of the American spirit. The spirit of our government is that we take a man from private life to serve his country, we pay him for the service, and when the service is over he goes back to private life. It does not seem though we should build in this country a system whereby a man who has held the highest office in a nation then becomes the ward of the government.

A great many of the faithful are not nearly so much worried about that extra session as they are about the arrangements that are to be made for the overflow meetings of the job hunters.

LAME EVERY MORNING.

A Bad Back is Always Worse in the Morning. Bisbee People Are Finding Relief.

A back that aches all day and causes discomfort at night is usually worse in the morning. Makes you feel as if you hadn't slept at all. Can't cure a bad back until you cure the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for sick or weakened kidneys—have cured thousands of just such troubles.

Testimony of Bisbee people proves the merit of Doan's.

G. M. Goodhue, Bisbee, Ariz., says: "I suffered severely from kidney trouble. My back ached as badly at night as during the day and I arose in the morning feeling lame and stiff. If I took cold it settled in my kidneys and my trouble became worse. I consulted physicians but they were unable to help me. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and I procured a box. They gave me relief in twenty-four hours and I continued using them until completely cured. I am glad to say that I have not suffered from kidney trouble since."
